Area Focused On: Disaster Response and Relief

About: AIKYA (ऐक्य) – Fundraising Project

Introduction

The AIKYA (ऐक्य) Fundraising Project was organized by the Interact Club of Balodaya Pokhara on 6th September 2026 with the objective of extending support to people affected by the floods. The project was conducted in collaboration with the Red Cross and Junior Red Cross Society, Pasbalde, with the common purpose of contributing to relief efforts and showing solidarity towards the affected communities. The term AIKYA, which represents unity and togetherness, was particularly meaningful to the project, as the initiative brought students together with a shared sense of responsibility and compassion. Natural disasters can affect communities in ways that go far beyond immediate physical damage. Families may lose essential belongings, face difficulties in their daily lives, and require support from the people around them. In such circumstances, collective community efforts become especially important. Keeping this in mind, the project encouraged students to look beyond their individual concerns and contribute towards a cause that affected people outside their immediate surroundings. It was an opportunity for students to understand that service is not only about giving what we have, but also about being willing to stand beside others when they need support the most.

Event Summary

The AIKYA Fundraising Project was conducted among the students of Balodaya Secondary School with the objective of collecting financial support for people affected by the floods. The fundraising did not follow a fixed time schedule, as the members worked collectively according to the requirements of the activity. The Treasurer, along with a few members and Jr Red Cross members, actively participated in collecting contributions from the students and coordinating the fundraising process.

Students were encouraged to contribute voluntarily according to their willingness and capacity. Although the amount contributed by each student varied, every contribution reflected a genuine sense of empathy, generosity, and concern for the people facing difficulties because of the floods. The activity created an opportunity for students to come together for a common cause and demonstrated that small efforts can lead to a greater impact when they are united with a common purpose.

The project was conducted in collaboration with the Junior Red Cross Society, which further strengthened the humanitarian purpose of the initiative. Through this collaboration, the students were able to connect their fundraising efforts with the broader objective of supporting people affected by the disaster. The funds collected were handed over through the school's relief effort to support the affected people, ensuring that the students' contributions were directed towards a meaningful cause.

Beyond the collection of funds, the project also provided students with a practical experience of teamwork, coordination, leadership, cooperation, and community service. Members learned to work together, take responsibility for their roles, and contribute their time and effort towards a cause beyond themselves. The participation of students also helped create awareness about the difficulties faced by communities during natural disasters and the importance of extending support during such challenging circumstances.

The initiative reflected the true meaning of AIKYA, as students from different classes came together with one intention—to help those in need. It reminded everyone that service does not always require extraordinary resources; sometimes, a helping hand, a kind heart, and a willingness to contribute are enough to make a difference. Overall, the AIKYA Fundraising Project was a meaningful expression of compassion and solidarity, showing that when individuals come together and work towards a common goal, their collective efforts can bring hope and meaningful support to people during times of hardship.
