About 'Harmony for Humanity'

Introduction:

The “Harmony for Humanity – World Peace Day International Online Programme” was organized to commemorate World Peace Day by bringing together young Interactors from Nepal and Bangladesh on a shared platform dedicated to peace, unity, friendship, and international fellowship. The programme sought to foster cross-border understanding and demonstrate how young people can contribute meaningfully towards a more harmonious and peaceful society through dialogue, collaboration, and mutual respect.

Project Summary:

The programme brought together the Interact Club of Pokhara Lakeside and the Interact Club of Chandpur, District 65, Bangladesh, providing an international platform for young Interactors to exchange perspectives and strengthen fellowship across borders.

The programme commenced with the National Anthems of Nepal and Bangladesh, followed by the Rotary Anthem and a silent invocation. Representatives from both participating clubs subsequently introduced themselves, establishing an atmosphere of openness and international fellowship.

The Nepal and Bangladesh teams delivered meaningful presentations centred on harmony, peace, unity, and mutual understanding. The exchange provided participants with diverse perspectives on the significance of peace in contemporary society and encouraged young people to recognise their role in fostering respect, coexistence, and constructive engagement within their communities.

The Interact Club of Chandpur, District 65, Bangladesh, expressed its appreciation for the opportunity to collaborate with the Interact Club of Pokhara Lakeside and shared its own initiatives undertaken in observance of World Peace Day. The exchange further enriched the programme by allowing both clubs to recognise their shared commitment towards advancing the values of peace and unity through youth-led initiatives.

Beyond the programme itself, the initiative strengthened cross-border friendship, cultural understanding, and institutional collaboration between the two Interact clubs. It demonstrated the potential of Interact to transcend geographical boundaries and provide young leaders with meaningful opportunities to learn from one another and build lasting international fellowship.

The programme concluded with a shared commitment among the participating Interactors to carry the message of peace, respect, harmony, and friendship beyond the virtual gathering and to translate these values into meaningful engagement within their respective communities.

Feedback of Attendees:

“This online event gave us an opportunity to build friendships, learn about another culture, and understand how youth can contribute to peace in their own communities.”

- Itr. Imon Pun (IT Head)

“Hearing perspectives from Bangladesh alongside those from Nepal encouraged me to think about peace not only as an international concept, but also as something that begins with mutual respect and understanding in our everyday interactions.”

- Itr. Sachin Karki (Member)
